Hi Dad

I have reading the affidavit and the exhibits. I notice that the emails Vanessa Varga sent to the solicitor in Greece that she has repeated the same questions again and again. From my understanding you are right in the fact that basically they can't do anything about the land in Greece. They have basically said that just because there may be names on the title documents that is not classed as ownership as it has not gone through the proper and LEGAL channels. I believe that Vanessa Varga kept asking the same questions over and over is deep down she knows that her client doesn't have a leg to stand on and perhaps she is a little afraid to admit that to Anna. What do you think?

How is it going over there and when will you be back?

From

Annie

Hi there

I got this moments before the hearing (I think it actually took place). The 'summons' gives 14-days for a response from the 'defendants' but she pushed it through the next day with a little help from some friends. She's left out a lot correspondence which will 'crucify' her. I'll provide the missing embarrassing pieces when I get back.

SA law is a joke.

Varga has composed a whopping 75-page affidavit + exhibits.

Another 'incriminating document' on Executor/solicitor abuse of the beneficiaries estate.

I'm ignoring SA jurisdiction because you'll see in Varga's affidavit and exhibits that Greece and the Greek consulate have virtually told her to 'piss off'.
